Bulletin of Bibliography

Volume 3

APRIL 1902 to JULY 1904

COMPLETE IN TEN NUMBERS

BOSTON
The Boston Book Company
Charles C. Soule, President
83-91 Francis St., Back Bay

THE BULLETIN OF BIBLIOGRAPHY is issued as a medium of communication between THE BOSTON BOOK COMPANY and its library customers.

The special work of THE BOSTON BOOK COMPANY is to supply libraries with collated and perfect sets of periodicals — using the term periodical in its broadest sense to cover year books and the publications of societies, as well as magazines and reviews in any language.

The favor of correspondence is requested whenever a periodical set, or a part of a set is desired.

CHAS. C. SOULE, President.

Buying Books for Both the Present and the Future.

WE wonder if librarians ever consider that a complete file of an indexed periodical is not only of present use, but will continue to be consulted for all time; and that many of the new books which claim so large a share of a library's book fund every year are, after a brief existence, of no value whatever, either being superseded by better and later works, or becoming dead wood on the shelves because the subject treated is no longer before the public.

If the above statement is true, and who can deny it, why not set aside a portion of the year's appropriation and buy sets of indexed periodicals? If you spend $1,000 for books, exclusive of magazine subscriptions, cannot $150 or $200 a year be put into the permanent collection of sets of serials.

These files will continue to increase in price each year, and, from a purely business point of view, will prove a good investment for the library. But when you buy, don't be persuaded to buy incomplete sets because they seem cheaper. They are not. Write us and we will gladly tell you why in any cases you specify. It is our business to serve libraries well. We will also tell you the cost of completing the imperfect sets you now have, and making them of use, and of future value.

NEW STOCK, APRIL, 1902.

We take account of stock in May, and will therefore allow a discount of 5% on all orders received from this list from libraries before May 15, 1902.

American Anthropologist, Washington and New York. 1888–97. Vols. 1–10. 10 vols., unbound. $28.00.

American Geographical Society, Bulletin and Journal. 1852–98. 32 vols., unbound. $100.00.

American Geologist, Minneapolis. 1888–98. Vols. 1–22. 22 vols., unbound. $30.00.

American Monthly Magazine, Washington. 1892–1901. Vols. 1–18, no 3, unbound. $25.00. (Scarce D. A. R. publication.)

Architect, London. 1869–97. Vols. 1–60. 60 vols. Cloth. Fine condition. $175.00. (This is one of the important English architectural periodicals.)

Brush and Pencil, Chicago. 1897–1900. Vols. 1–9, unbound. $40.00. (This Poole set has from the first been very scarce complete. This is the only copy we have ever had for sale.)

Canadian Gazette. 1883–96. Vols. 1–27. Half morocco. $65.00.

Democratic Review. 1827–58. Vols. 1–43, in 42 vols. All published. Some vols. bound. $175.00. (This very scarce set is complete, except one plate and two titles and indexes and is very unusual.)

Journal of American Folk-Lore, Boston. 1888–1900. Vols. 1–13, unbound. (Poole set.) $30.00.

Journal of the Franklin Institute. 1826–1901. Vols. 1–152. 90 vols. bound, rest unbound. $225.00.

Literary World, Boston, 1870–97. Vols. 1–28. 28 vols.; partial in binding; (lacks 6 titles and indexes.) $84.00. (One of the scarcest Poole sets. Even the large Boston Libraries have not all the early numbers.)

Literature, London. 4to. 1897–1902. 9 vols. and 1 no. All published, unbound. $20.00.

Optician, London. Vols. 1–14. 1891–98. 14 vols. bound in 7. Cloth. $15.00.

Oxford and Cambridge Review. 1845–47. 5 vols. half calf. $7.50.

Quarterly Review, London. 1809–1901. Vols. 1–194. 194 vols. in half-morocco; fine set. $150.00. (Sets of this review in poor condition of binding are common, but seldom do we see a set like the above, and at less than it costs to bind it.)

Southern Historical Society, papers, Richmond. 1876–88. Vols. 1–16, bound in 13 vols. Half roan. Scarce Poole item. $45.00.

Zeitschrift für physikalische chemie. 1887–99. Vols. 1–28. 8°. Leipsic. Vols. 1–17, one-half morocco, rest unbound.

Bulletin of Bibliography

VOL. 3 APRIL, 1902 No. 1

This Bulletin is published, primarily, as a means of communication between The Boston Book Company and its customers. A constant endeavor will be made, however, to include in each issue enough original matter of sufficient value to induce librarians to preserve and bind up the numbers. Each volume will be provided with a title-page and an index.

No subscription price will be put upon the journal, and numbers will not be sold. It will be sent to a selected list of libraries, customers or likely to become customers of The Boston Book Company. The circulation of the Bulletin will be increased in proportion to the interest shown in it, and in the special work of the Library Department of The Boston Book Company. Correspondence is solicited, and should be addressed,

The Boston Book Company,
83–91 Francis St., Back Bay, Boston, Mass.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

WITH this number we begin volume three of THE BULLETIN OF BIBLIOGRAPHY, and our sixth year of its publication. We venture to state once more that we do not sell the numbers but expect such returns from our advertising pages as will justify the quarterly issue. You can help us make the BULLETIN better in no way so well as by ordering liberally from our pages. If no set you want happens to be offered this time, please make a point of writing us and naming sets you do desire. We can then offer what you need, or at least take steps to secure it in the near future. THE BOSTON BOOK COMPANY is the only firm that can supply from stock over two thirds of the titles on any list of sets you order.

This month we publish the first portion of a Bibliography of King Alfred which we know will be welcome. The series of best editions of standard authors is continued, Stevenson being the author treated this time.

The Reading List in Library Science, published in our January number, has been much in demand. We can supply this in pamphlet form at ten cents a copy while our stock remains. Order before it is out of print.

ALFRED THE GREAT.

AN ANNOTATED LIST OF BOOKS AND ARTICLES TO AID IN THE STUDY OF KING ALFRED'S LIFE AND TIMES.

Compiled by Mary Medlicott of the City Library, Springfield, Mass.

"When criticism has removed the needless excrescences of aberglaube, and when all allowances have been made for hero-worship, it is clear that there are few kings in history who have less need of fictitious glory than Alfred, or whose fame rests on a more solid basis. His influence and character remain stamped on the most permanent elements in our national life.... If it were necessary to sum up the impression which the study of Alfred's life leaves, it might perhaps be said that he creates a type which has never lost its influence in England's history. He is the ideal Englishman. He has great common-sense, but it is common-sense raised to the power of genius. He is a mystic, but he is a practical mystic. He is a reformer, but a reformer who builds on the past, and yet builds for the future. He lives to serve God and his country, and he discovers that by serving the Kingdom of God wisely and simply he can serve his country best."—Macfadyen's Alfred the West-Saxon.

History of the Times.

Allen, G. Early Britain–Anglo-Saxon Britain. 1884.
A brief sketch of Britain under the early English conquerors, rather from the social than from the political point of view.

Anglo-Saxon chronicle. Chronicon Saxonicum; ed. ac Latinum fecit E. Gibson. 1692.
Anglo-Saxon and Latin in parallel columns.

— Same. Translated and edited by J. A. Giles. Bound with Bede's Ecclesiastical history. 1848.
An early chronology, rather than history.

Armitage, E. S. Childhood of the English nation. 1877.
This little work briefly sketches the "beginnings of English history," especially dwelling on the social life.

Bright, J. F. History of England. 1888, v. 1.
One of the best text-books on the history of England . . . a book of solid rather than of brilliant qualities.—Adams.

Cassell & Co., publishers. Illustrated history of England. (1887) v. 1.
The text by William Howitt; the illustrations, good and numerous, forming the chief value.

Church, A. J. Story of early Britain. 1890.
A volume in the "Story of the nations" series, giving a good account of the physical as well as historical features of early Britain.

Church, R. W. Beginnings of the middle ages. 1888.
A volume in the "Epochs of history" series, dwelling briefly on the consolidation of the English people under Alfred.

Craik, G. L., and Macfarlane, C. Pictorial history of England. 1846, v. 1.
Interesting for the old pictures, and reliable, but not so attractive to the ordinary reader as more modern works.

Cunningham, G. G. Lives of eminent and illustrious Englishmen. 1838, v. 1.
Designed as a history of England in the lives of men of note; gives a brief sketch of Alfred.

Earle, J., ed. Two of the Saxon chronicles, parallel, with extracts from the others. 1865.
With important preface, glossary, and full notes.

Freeman, E. A. History of the Norman conquest of England. 1877. v. 1. Chap. 2, Formation of the Kingdom of England.

One of the greatest monuments of English historical scholarship. —Adams.

Gardiner, S. R. Student's history of England. 1890, v. 1.

Green, J. R. Conquest of England. 1883.

A valuable work.—Adams.

— History of the English people. v. 1.

The most important general history of England.—Adams.

Guest, M. J. Handbook of English history (based on his lectures). 1886.

Brief, but clearly and topically arranged, and well adapted for young people.

Henry of Huntington. Chronicle of England. Bohn's Antiquarian library, 1833.

Hume, D. History of England. 1828, v. 1.

The popularity of "Hume" . . . is owing to the literary rather than the historical value of the work.—Adams.

Knight, C. Popular history of England. 1856, v. 1.

Next in importance to Green.—Adams.

Lappenberg, J. M. History of England under the Anglo-Saxon kings. 1845, v. 2.

A history of events rather than a description of the time.—Adams.

Lingard, J. History of England. 1853, v. 1.

The great Roman Catholic authority on the history of England; scholarly, but strongly partisan.—Adams.

Matthew of Westminster. Flowers of history. 1853, v. 1. Bohn's Antiquarian library.

Miller, T. History of the Anglo-Saxons. 1878.

Milton, J. Britain under Trojan, Roman, and Saxon rule. 1870.

Brief, and interesting chiefly for its authorship.

Palgrave, Sir F. History of the Anglo-Saxons. 1876.

Palgrave writes as an antiquarian rather than as an historian proper.—Sonnenschein.

Pearson, C. H. History of England during the early and middle ages. 1867, v. 1.

A successful attempt to bring into a convenient form, for the use of students, the latest results of investigations into the history of early and mediæval England.—Adams.

— Historical maps of England during the first thirteen centuries. 1870.

Map of Anglia-Anglo-Saxonica, p. 24, gives names of towns and memorable localities.

Powell, F. Y. Early England. 1886.

Epochs of English history, edited by M. Creighton, Book I, treats of Alfred the truth-teller.

Ramsay, Sir J. H. Foundations of England. 1898, v. 1.

The teacher, no less than the student, has reason to thank Sir James for bringing together all this knowledge from many scattered sources and placing it within his reach.—The Athenæum.

Roger of Wendover. Flowers of history. 1849, v. 1. Bohn's Antiquarian library.

St. John, J. A. History of the four conquests of England. 1862, v. 1.

Reflects credit on the patience, research, industry and learning of the author.—The Athenæum.

Six old English chronicles. 1848. Bohn's Antiquarian library.

These, and Matthew of Westminster, are reprints of old works, forming much of the basis of modern histories.

Tappan, E. M. England's story; a history for grammar and high schools. 1901.

Arranged, first, as familiar talks with scholars; brief and clear, taking up only important events.

Terry, B. History of England. 1901.

Part I, Teutonic England, gives a good picture of the times and the people, with good maps, chronological tables, etc.

Turner, S. History of the Anglo-Saxons. 1807, v. 1.

This has been the standard work . . . Antiquated in many respects, it contains a valuable collection of facts.—Allen.

Valentine, Mrs. Sea fights and land battles.

William of Malmesbury. Chronicle of the kings of England. Translated by J. Sharpe. 1847.

EPITAPH ON ALFRED, AS GIVEN BY HENRY OF HUNTINGTON.

"Nobilitas innata tibi probitatis honorem,
Armipotens Alurede, dedit, probitasque laborem,
Perpetuumque labor nomen, cui mixta dolori,
Gaudia semper erant, spes semper mixta timori.
Si modo victus erat, ad crastina bella pavebat.
Iam post transactos regni vitæque labores
Christus ei sit vera quies sceptrumque perenne."

TRANSLATION BY THOMAS FORESTER.

"Toilsome thy onward path to high renown,
Thorny the chaplet that entwin'd thy crown,
Unconquered Alfred! Thine the dauntless mind,
That in defeat could fresh resources find.
What though thy hopes were ever dashed with care,
Still they were never clouded with despair;
To-day, victorious, future wars were plann'd,
To-day, defeated, future triumphs scann'd.
Thy way-soiled garments, and thy blood-stain'd sword,
Sad pictures of the lot of kings afford;
Who else, like this, throughout the wide world's space,
Bore in adversity so brave a face?
The sword, for ever bare in mortal strife,
Fail'd to cut short thy destin'd thread of life;
Peaceful thy end; may Christ be now thy rest!
Thine be the crown and sceptre of the blest!"

Works Illustrative of Saxon Life.

Anglo-Saxon chronicle. Bohn's Antiquarian library, 1847.

The best way to read early English history is to read it in the English Chronicles."—MacPadyen.

Ingulph, Florence of Worcester, Henry of Huntington, Matthew of Westminster, Roger de Hoveden, Roger of Wendover, William of Malmesbury, are among these chroniclers.

Barnes, W. Early England and the Saxon English. 1869.

Illustrates the habits of the Saxons.

Draper, W. H. Legislation and local government of Alfred. Green Bag, v. 12, p. 48.

Elton, C. I. Origins of English history. 1890,

This treats of the history of the island, through the Anglo-Saxon conquest, throwing a side-light on the times.

Gneist, R. Student's history of the English parliament. 1887.

Treats in detail of the Anglo-Saxon Gemótes, or law courts.

Greswell, W, Country of Alfred the Great. In Fortnightly Review, v. 72, p. 464.

A description of Somersetshire and the Isle of Athelney.

Kemble, J. M. Saxons in England; a history of the English commonwealth. 1849, 2 v.

If one desires the most complete understanding attainable of the political and social conditions of the country at this early period, Kemble is the most helpful of all authors.—Adams.

Kitchin, G. W. Winchester. 1890, chap. 1–2.

A volume in the Historic towns series, devoted to the old capital city of Alfred's kingdom.

Metcalfe, F. The Englishman and the Scandinavian; or, a comparison of Anglo-Saxon and old Norse literature. 1880.

Designed to give a "kind of bird's-eye view of the whole matter—the customs, notions, language and literature of the two peoples."

Strutt, J. Chronicle of England, 2 v., 1777, and later editions.

Curious and interesting, but little read now.

"Watching the habits of these crabs is always attended with some difficulties, as most of them are nocturnal. . . . Only in the Bermudas did we get Gecarcinoids:—the large Cardisoma guanhumi, which was caught by torch-light in the interior of the island, but all the specimens we got were males; besides, Mr. Moseley caught Gecarcinus lateralis and Ocypoda rhombea, and I myself caught several crabs allied to Boscia. I watched there also for a long time the lively Grapsus cruentatus, which lives in great quantities in Hungry Bay, among the mangrove trees. The holes, however, it always makes so near the shore that it is sure to find water at a depth of two or three feet. What its mode of development is I could not find out, as it was evidently not their breeding season [June]."

GOSLING, W. G. Shakespeare's "Tempest"; [by W. G. Gosling, of St. Johns, Newfoundland]. Vol. 4, (no. 77, April 8, 1899), p. 366-367 and (no. 78, April 15, 1899), p. 394-396.

NOTE.—This writer begins by asking; "How far was Shakespeare influenced in writing the Tempest by the recently reported wreck of Sir George Somers at the Bermudas?" Kipling, in answer to a writer, in a weekly journal, who had endeavored to show that Shakespeare was not influenced by this event, felt impelled to uphold Bermuda's claim to be that island and to give his opinion upon the question based upon his impressions received on the spot. "His surmise that Shakespeare obtained on account of Sir George Somers' shipwreck from a sailor just returned from that disastrous voyage is particularly happy, and impresses one with its probability." The writer of this paper goes on to compare passage after passage of Strachey's narrative of the shipwreck with over thirty in the Tempest. Their similarity is so striking that the conclusion is but natural that Shakespeare knew of Sir George Somers' wreck and made free use of its incidents in his drama.

FOOTE, Mr.—. Life and people at the Bermudas. Vol. 23 (no. 292, December 22, 1849), p. 533-534.

NOTE.—This description was written by Mr. Foote for the Buffalo Commercial Advertiser. The natural strength of Bermuda has been greatly increased by numerous fortifications. So intricate are the channels that "no one ever thinks of taking in a vessel in the night." After describing Ireland Island, the convicts, troops, and town of Hamilton; Groopers' Pond, now better known as the "Devil's Hole," was visited and fully described. So ravenous are the groopers that "One gentleman drew out a fish that would weigh ten pounds, that had seized the crooked handle of his cane. A man's life, if in the pool with them, would be worth less than if thrown into a den of ravening panthers."

NOTE.—From the British quarterly review. At page 776 occurs the following note: "The Bermuda group has been shown by the Challenger soundings to rise like a vast column from a small base lying at a depth of more than three miles; and since there is no submarine ridge of which it could be supposed to be an outlier, and the islands are themselves entirely composed of coral, it seems likely that we have here a typical exemplification of Mr. Darwin's remarkable doctrine, that though the reef-building coral animals cannot live and grow at a greater depth than twenty fathoms, yet that by the slow progressive subsidence of the bottom, and the contemporaneous addition of new coral to the summit, a pile of coral limestone may be built up (or rather may grow up) to any height." For an instance of "two species of coral growing luxuriantly" at a depth of 400 fathoms, see the note to Murray's article, in Nature, vol. 39, given below.

CATALOGUE of the Rawlinson manuscripts in the Bodleian Library. [Book notice.] March 28, 1901, p. 254–255.

NOTE.—Among the papers relating to America, catalogued in this work, appears "a copybook of papers relating to the Bermudas, 1615–88, (which) includes a collection of laws, 1623–63, and orders, 1622–61, additional to the printed laws of 1622, and letters and papers regarding the quo warranto brought against the Somers' Islands company."

Nature; a weekly illustrated journal of science. London. 8°.

JONES, John Matthew. A pelagic floating fish nest. Vol. 5 (April 11, 1872), p. 462.

NOTE.—This naturalist says: "Among other rarities which I have been fortunate enough to procure since my arrival in the Bermudas is a pelagic fish nest, ... It was taken from a mass of gulf weed (Fucus natans) blown ashore about a month ago. ... It is truly a wonderful specimen of Nature's handiwork; a house built without hands resting securely on the bosom of the rolling deep."

CRUISE (The) of the "Challenger." Vol. 14 (no. 344, June 1, 1876), p. 93–105.

NOTE.—The part relating to the Bermudas is found on p. 97–98, and contains four views of Bermuda.

[GOODE's Catalogue of the fishes of the Bermudas: a book notice.] Vol. 14 (no. 351, July 20, 1876), p. 261.

NOTE.—"The first complete account of the ichthyology of that portion of the world."

MERRIFIELD, Mary P. Gulf-weed. Vol. 18 (no. 470, October 31, 1878), p. 708–711.

NOTE.—"Specimens 'covered with fructification' have been found by Mr. Moseley, the naturalist of the Challenger expedition, in Harrington Sound, Bermudas, which islands lie in the very heart of the Sargasso Sea."—p. 710. This article also contains other references to the Bermudas.

JONES, John Matthew. The Gulf-weed (Sargassum bacciferum) a means of migration for fishes and marine invertebrates. Vol. 19 (no. 486, February 20, 1872), p. 363.

NOTE.—Large quantities of the Gulf-weed are washed up on the shores of Bermuda by the winter storms. It is utilized by the farmers as a fertilizer. In it are found various species of pelagic and littoral crustaceans, many of which are enumerated in this article. In this connection see also his Introduction to Bulletin, No. 25 of the UNITED STATES NATIONAL MUSEUM (1884), p. ix–x.

MURRAY, John. The structure and origin of coral reefs and islands. Vol. 22 (no. 563, August 12, 1880), p. 351–355.

NOTE.—Two references to Bermuda, for which see entry under Murray in the Proceedings of the ROYAL SOCIETY OF EDINBURGH.

HEMSLEY, William Botting. The Botany of the "Challenger" expedition. Vol. 27 (no. 698, March 15, 1883), p. 462–463.

NOTE.—An entire column is given to the Botany of Bermuda, in which the literature of the subject is noticed. "The earliest references we find to the vegetable productions of these islands are in the "Historye of the Bermudaes," edited by Sir J. H. Lefroy."—p. 463.

IRVINE, Robert. Tables showing solubility of carbonate of lime, under different forms, in sea water, in grammes per litre. Vol. 37 (no. 965, April 26, 1888), p. 605.

NOTE.—Four materials from Bermudas were included in these tests, viz.: Harbour mud; Isophyllia dipsacea, Dana; Millepora ramosa, Pallas; and Porites clavaria, Lamk.

BEDDARD, Frank Evers. The tail-bristles of a West-Indian Earthworm. Vol. 39 (no. 992, November 1, 1888), p. 15–16.

NOTE.—A description of an earthworm received from Bermuda, which the writer thinks may belong to the genus Urochaeta.

WILSON-BARKER, David. Currents and coral reefs. Vol. 39 (no. 1008, February 21, 1889), p. 389–390.

NOTE.—Reference is here made to the Challenger and Argus Banks and the relation existing between them and Bermuda and their effects in causing the coral reefs on the north-west and south-west sides of these islands.

MURRAY, John. Structure, origin, and distribution of coral reefs and islands. Vol. 39 (no. 1009, February, 28, 1889), p. 424–428.

NOTE.—A lecture delivered at the Royal Institution, March 16, 1888, revised. "When the Challenger sounded along the west coast of Africa, there was no suspicion that between her stations she was sailing over submerged cones. Since then, however, the soundings of telegraph ships have correctly mapped out no less than seven of these peaks between the latitude of Lisbon and the island of Teneriffe. The depths on the summits of these vary from 12 to 500 fathoms. On one of them, at 400 fathoms, two species of coral (Lophohelia prolifera and Amphihelia oculata) were growing luxuriantly. Throughout the ocean basins about 300 such submarine cones, rising from great depths up to within depths of from 500 to 10 fathoms from the surface, are already known, or indicated by soundings."—p. 425. References to Bermuda occur also on pp. 425 and 427.

TARR, Ralph Stockman. A query concerning the origin of atolls. Vol. 54 (no. 1388, June 4, 1896), p. 101.

NOTE.—Granting an atoll ring formed in the mid-ocean in the way which the theory supported by Dr. Murray and others demands, would we not of necessity have first a ring of reef or beach rock, then coral sand which with age continued to rise in elevation until the Bermuda stage was reached?

MORRISON, W. K. Suggested reef boring at the Bermuda Islands. Vol. 55 (no. 1410, November 5, 1896), p. 5–6.

NOTE.—The failure of the Royal Society boring expedition suggests to the author: "to call attention to the great value of the Bermudas as a permanent home for a scientific station, and where borings might readily be conducted at any convenient time. A glance at the map will show that the fauna of the deep sea, of coral reefs, the avifauna of the ocean, and a complex meteorology, may all be studied at one and the same station, and in close proximity to New York and Halifax."—p. 5.

SAVILLE-KENT, W. Suggested reef boring at the Bermudas—and elsewhere. Vol. 55 (no. 1414, December 3, 1896), p. 109.

NOTE.—This writer differs from the preceding one as to the value of the Bermudas as a station for reef borings, owing to the numerous caverns and fissures which, in his judgment, would render the results of such borings of a negative value through the uncontrollable infiltration of sea-water.

CHANGES of level in the Bermuda Islands, by Prof. Ralph S. Tarr. Vol. 55 (no. 1422, January 28, 1897), p. 311.

NOTE.—A summary of his paper read before the London Geological Society, Jan. 6, 1897. "It appears that most of the work of construction of the Bermudas has been done in recent times" (see NATURE, vol. liv., p. 101).

L., R. Rough notes and memoranda relating to the natural history of the Bermudas. By the late J. L. Hurdis. [A review.] Vol. 55 (no. 1435, April 29, 1897), p. 604.

NOTE.—"A few illustrations of birds and scenery would . . . have considerably lightened the perusal of a very readable book." It might have been added, by the reviewer, that the insertion of a good ndex would have greatly enhanced the value of the work.

BRISTOL, Charles Lawrence. Marine biology at the Bermudas. Vol. 57 (no. 1465, November 25, 1897), p. 90–91.

NOTE.—An account of the observations of an expedition of the biological department of New York University, by Prof. Charles L. Bristol, contributed to Science, is the source from which the particulars in this article have been derived.

Nautical magazine and Journal of naval reserves. London. 8°.

SMALL, H. B. In the Bermudas. Vol. 67 (no. 8, August, 1898), p. 556–561.

NOTE.—"Bermuda, as well as being styled 'the land of the lily and the rose,' may also be called 'the last surviving relic of Eden.'"—p. 561.

Nautilus; a monthly journal devoted to the interests of conchologists. Philadelphia, 8°.

ALDRICH, T. H. [Bermuda shells.] Vol. 3 (no. 1, May, 1889), p. 9.

NOTE.—Four species are mentioned:—H. (Fruticicola) similaris, Fer.; Tridopsis appressa, Say; Stenogyra decollata, L.; and S. octona, Chem. The first "three have been probably introduced in the past 25 years," the latter "is not mentioned by Bland." The following manuscript note on one of the fly-leaves of this volume in the library of the Academy of Natural Sciences of Philadelphia is of general interest. "The Nautilus is a continuation of the 'Conchologists' Exchange,' and begins with vol. III, no. 1. The first number of the 'Exchange' was printed on a postal card and contains nothing but a list of shells for exchange by Mr. Averell, Dec. 8/91."

Naval and military magazine. London. 8°.

BLATHWAYT, Raymond. Is Bermuda safe? Vol. 2 (no. 6, June, 1898), p. 56–58.

NOTE.—A discussion concerning the strength of Bermuda's fortifications and their ability to withstand capture by a hostile force.

MITCHELL, Colonel E. Our Gibraltar of the West; or, Bermuda past and present. Vol. 3 (no. 3, September, 1898), p. 202–207. 3 illustrations.

NOTE.—A descriptive and historical account of the islands. Among other subjects treated are—convict establishment; blockade running during the Civil War; visits of Princess Louise (1883) and of Prince Alfred (1861); epidemics from 1699 to date; etc.

Neill, Edward Duffield. Early settlement of Virginia and Virginiola [Bermuda] as noticed by poets and players. Minneapolis, 1878. 8°.

RICH, R. Nevves from Virginia. The lost flocke triumphant; [etc.] By R. Rich, Gent., one of the voyage. p. 29–35.

NOTE.—A reprint of an exceedingly rare pamphlet. See preceding entry under the MAGAZINE OF AMERICAN HISTORY.

Neues Jahrbuch für Mineralogie, Geologie, und Paleontologie. Stuttgart. 8°.

BOETTGER, O. Übergänge von Eratopsis zu Erato. Hörnes' und Auinger's neustes Werk. Realia fossil. Lebende Vertreter Zweier Hochheimer untermiocäner Landschnecken. 2 Band [Erstes Heft] (1884), p. 136–139.

NOTE.—"Dr. O. Boettger proposed in 1884, for the lower Miocene fossil Helix imbricata Braun, and the H. Bermudiensis Pfr., the name of Pæciloxonites. He gave no diagnosis of the new group, but assigned it a position between the typical Palæarctic Zonites and the American groups Zonyalina and Moreletia, a position which the anatomical characters prove to be erroneous."—PILSBRY in Heilprin's Bermuda Islands, p. 191–192.

New England magazine. Boston. 8°.
